International Baby Wearing Week & Reusable Nappy Week are both happening this October

Wow it's all happening in October, with both International Baby Wearing Week and Reusable Nappy Week running back to back!!

Firstly, 'Baby Wearing' is a term used when carrying your baby using slings, wraps, or carriers, and is an age old tradition that just keeps getting better as more research is done into its benefits.

There are so many ways to wear your baby or toddler, that there is a way for anyone willing. For new born babies, baby wearing is a great way of settling bubs suffering from colic, preemie babies also benefit from the close skin to skin time. Wearing your baby also means you can get on with things while still bonding with your bub, ahhh the joy of making yourself a sandwich or going for a good walk.

And secondly, 'Reusable nappies' refers to cloth nappies that can be reused thus decreasing the impact to the earth and saving you a few hundred dollars by time your bub is nappy free!

Reusable cloth nappies have many benefits beyond saving your wallet and the environment. Good cloth nappies should be breathable, natural, and free from toxic glues, thus making them more skin friendly for your bubs bum! And the washing you ask? Well it's not that bad, we all know that babies = more washing whether you use cloth nappies or not!

Come in store to learn more about baby wearing and reusable nappies and take advantage of great in store specials during these promotional weeks.

Baby Yeti will be running in store nappy demonstrations during Reusable Nappy Week, and will also run a Baby Wearing Workshop at the Body Mind
